DETAILED ACTION§ 1.105 Requirements for information.

Examiner requires a copy of any and all known non-patent literature, published application, or patent (U.S. or foreign) that relates to the claimed invention pertaining to the Family Feud as presented in the specification of the application.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

Claims 1-17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Demar et al in view of Walker ad Feud History.

Applicant's argues against Walker individually. However appellant is reminded that one cannot show nonobviousness by attacking references individually where the rejections are based on combinations of references. See In re Keller, 642 F.2d 413, 208 USPQ 871 (CCPA 1981); In re Merck & Co., 800 F.2d 1091, 231 USPQ 375 (Fed. Cir. 1986). While appellant makes that argument that Walker fails to show a "bonusing game", he fails to provide a definition of what he considers such a game to be. Clearly, Walker teaches that players receive a "bonus" by enhanced real slot payouts with correct answers to trivia question. The issue of bonusing games can be more broadly viewed that there exists an unlimited number of combinations of "bonusing events" activities that are available for a game designer to select from for a secondary bonusing game. In considering this the examiner has considered whether the claims at hand involve a mere substitution of one game activity for that of another, any unexpected results achieved or any particular problem solved. In the instant case the claimed invention performs and produces substantially the same results as the prior art with the exception of the requirement of a different secondary game. As such, the substitution of a trivia game for that of a secondary game in a bonus game is considered a mere substitution of one game activity for that of another that is shown in Walker.

With respect to the Family Feud, appellant has admitted them as prior art in their specification. Where the specification identifies work done by another as "prior art," the subject matter so identified is treated as admitted prior art. In re Nomiya, 509 F.2d 566, 571, 184 USPQ 607, 611 (CCPA 1975). Family Feud is a known trivia type game in which "survey-based" results are used. Where appellant states that he did not receive a copy of the "Feud History" to "analyze". The 892 of the previous office action cited the web link. For the convenience of appellant, a copy is furnished with this office action.

Changing the bonusing game of Demar to a "survey-based" bonusing game would have been obvious to one skilled in the art in order to replace the secondary game activity of Demar with that of another known game activity that is known in the art and taught by Walker and Family Feud. Lastly merely changing the "theme" of a game does not result in a new game. This position is analogous to the determination that a mere change in printed matter does not distinguish over the prior art. In re Gulack, 703 F.2d 1381, 1385-86, 217 USPQ 401, 404 (Fed. Cir. 1983) ("Where the printed matter is not functionally related to the substrate, the printed matter will not distinguish the invention from the prior art in terms of patentability [T]he critical question is whether there exists any new and unobvious functional relationship between the printed matter and the substrate.")

Conclusion

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
